The Railroad Problem.

The latest railroad statistics published by the Railway Age for 1897, place the number of miles of railroad completed in the United States at 184,464. The increase in mileage during the year 1896 was 1,864 miles. The railroads are capitalized at $5,300,000,000, nearly $30,000 a mile. There are 374,000 persons employed in conducting transportation, 168,000 in maintaining equipment, 234,000 in maintenance of ways and structures, 32,000 in general administration making a total of 818,000 employed in the railway service. This vast amount of capital, employing such an immense army of men, and effecting such vital interests, covering the entire United States, makes a dangerous political factor, and one which threatens to become stronger than the government itself. The effort at regulating the railroads, if persistently resisted, is liable to become a struggle between the government and the railroads for supremacy. The last campaign no open effort was ever made to consolidate this large vote in support of any particular political party. So long as the managers of the railroads confined themselves to their legitimate business no apprehension was felt about the political influence which they would exert, but when it became evident that this vast army of men, these vast interests were to be consolidated and concentrated in the support of the Republican party it naturally created alarm for the safety of the Republic. If such a policy is to be continued, no matter what the political issues may be which are pleaded in justification of such a course, there is a struggle coming between the people and the railroads in this country which will end either in the government owning the railroads or the railroads owning the government. The railroad business should be divorced from partisan politics, and if that were done in good faith it would greatly strengthen the position of the owners of the railroad property, and would add much to the efficiency of their service to the public. Unless this is done the property interests of railroads will be endangered as well as the stability and good order of the government. Those who have invested their money in railroads should be fully protected in the exercise of the right which properly belong to the railroads as common carriers, but should they be recognized as political agencies, seeking to dominate the government instead of endeavoring to serve the public as common carriers the hostility to them would be greatly increased, and their position would be much less secure than it is at present. Managers of railroad property might as well look these conditions squarely in the face and recognize the manifest truth. The future of the railroads in this country largely depends on the wisdom of those who manage them. There is less and less disposition every year among the people to tolerate the policy of converting public agencies, created by the people under the sanctions of law, into political agencies for the accomplishment of certain governmental policies which the people do not regard as friendly to their interests.—Louisville Dispatch.

The Secret of Wealth

Here is a German legend of an old farmer calling his three idle sons around him when on his death bed, to impart to them an important secret.

"My sons," said he, "a great treasure lies hid in the estate which I am about to leave you." The old man gasped.

"Where is it hid?" exclaimed the sons in a breath.

"I am about to tell you," said the old man; you will have to dig for it—"But his breath failed him before he could impart the weighty secret, and he died.

Forthwith the sons set to work with spade and mattock upon the long neglected fields, and they turned up every sod and clod on the estate. They discovered no treasure, but they learned to work; and when the fields were sown and the harvest came, lo! the yield was prodigious in consequence of the thorough tillage which they had undergone. Then it was that they discovered the treasure concealed in the estate, of which their wise old father had advised them.

We live in a land of high mountains and high taxes, low valleys and low wages, big crooked rivers and big crooked statesmen; big lakes, big strikes, big drunks, big pumpkins, big men with pumpkin heads; silver streams that gambol in the mountains, and pious politicians who gamble in the night; roaring cataracts and roaring orators; fast trains and fast horses, fast young men, and girls fast, faster, fastest; sharp lawyers, sharp financiers and sharp-toed shoes; noisy children, fertile plains that lie like a sheet of water, and thousands of newspapers that lie like thunder, says an exchange.

Statistics of life insurance show that in the last 25 years the average woman's life has increased from about 42 years to nearly 46, or more than 8 per cent. In the same period the average man's life has increased from nearly 42 years to about 44, or 5 per cent.

The report comes from Knoxville, Tenn., that Mahala Mullins, the mountain giantess, has become the mother of quadruplets.

Between thirty and forty persons were injured by the explosion of a keg of powder during a Christmas celebration at Asheville, N. C.

The Americans people excel all others in inventive genius. The total number of patents issued by the United States is 562,458, and the total number by all the rest of the world is 981,061.

Great damage was done by the sleet storm which prevailed for three days in Texas. The effect on live stock was disastrous, many cattle being killed, the loss to some herds being as high as 35 per cent.

If Spoutspring had a railroad it would be of much value to her people by giving a market for the timber which is close to this place, but too far to haul to the railroad at the present time. It lays within the power of local capitalists to build an electric road from this point to Clay City, and they should do this at once.

Another Federal Court District Proposed to be Formed in Kentucky.

Congressman Evans will introduce a bill in Congress for the formation of another Federal Court District in Kentucky.

It is the general opinion of the United States officers that Kentucky will have the second Federal Court District before the close of Congress. The creation of this new district will cause the appointment of a new District Judge, District Attorney, Assistant District Attorney, a Marshall and all the necessaries that these various officers will require.

In his message to General Assembly Governor Bradley opposes the abolition of party emblems, wants the separate coach law repealed, denounces tamperers and wants counties held responsible for the damage done, and recommends the abolishment of Land and Agricultural bureaus and names many other items for the Assembly's consideration.

The Legislature.

The Kentucky Legislature is getting ready for business, and it is preparing to proceed with its work in a manner worthy of a deliberative body representative of the great state of Kentucky. Thus far everything has been harmonious and entirely satisfactory to the Democratic party and people of the state. No disposition has been made manifested to proceed with legislation hastily or with undue consideration, and there is no reason whatever to fear that any measures will be railroaded through the Legislature without sufficient discussion or without due regard for the sentiments of the people of the state. The Legislature is thoroughly representative of the people, and it may be depended upon to execute the will of those by whose authority and power it exists, and whose servant it realizes itself to be. Messrs. Goebel and Beckam, who by their official positions will exercise great influence on legislation, are well known as men who may be trusted to carry out the wishes of their constituents. The steering committees are men of standing and ability, and thus far all that has been done is of such a character as to confirm the confidence of the people in the men who have been entrusted with the power of legislation and to strengthen the hope that Kentucky will be thoroughly satisfied with the results of the session.—Louisville Dispatch.

Postage Stamp Language.

Berlin women reached an extreme of folly when they invented this "postage stamp language." The stamp in the usual place—that is, on the top right hand corner of the envelope, means, when upright, "I desire your friendship;" across, "Do you love me?" upside down, "Don't write me again;" crooked, "Write at once." When the stamp is at the bottom corner on the right hand it means, if upright, "Your love makes me happy." When it is on the left top corner it means, if upright, "I love you;" across, "My heart is another's;" upside down, "Good day my darling." When it is on the bottom left hand corner it means, upright, "Fidelity will be rewarded;" across, "Do not leave me alone in my sorrow;" upside down, "You have withstood all trials." When the stamp is on the same line as the surname of the address, it means, if upright, "Accept my love;" across, "I long to see you;" upside down, "I am engaged."

He had just returned from the top of the Chilkat pass and was apparently glad of it.

"How was the weather when you left?" inquired a friend. "Cold?"

"Yes, but not so bad as it will be along in January, after the mosquitoes get out of the air and let the wind have a chance. Then it gets good and cold. A man told me who had wintered up there seven years that it was so cold in January that they froze the flames of their candles and sold them for strawberries. He said they kept their fires over night by putting them out in the air and letting them freeze and thawed them out in the morning. He said he had seen four men die of colic from eating whisky that was frozen so hard that it wouldn't thaw inside of them. He said the cows all gave ice cream till they froze to death. He said he knew a clerk in a hotel on the Yukon that got rich selling the diamonds he wore, said diamonds being nothing on earth but ice crystals that didn't thaw till after he had got out of the country. He said he had seen a man fall off the roof of a barn and freeze so stiff before he hit the ground. He said he had seen smoke freeze in the chimney till fire wouldn't draw, and he knew of one case where the smoke froze after it had got 100 feet up and fell back on the house, knocking a hole in the roof big enough to drive a yoke of steers through. He said the reason the nights were so long in that country was that the dark got froze so hard that the daylight couldn't thaw his way through in less than six months. He said—"

"Excuse me," interrupted the friend, "did this party have affidavits with these statements?"

"He said he had, but I guess he must have froze to death hunting for them, because he never came back when I asked him to go after them for me," and the returned Chilkater smiled a smile that was childlike and bland.—Washington Star
